| 3  | 10:07-10:15 | New Food Code Changes | Chris Stringer
Food Program Supervisor                  | • CFPM updates
• Verifiable illness training                                                                 | • Certified Food Protection Manager (CFPM) requirement will begin on March 1, 2023.
• DOH has created a CFPM tool kit for guidance.
• No cap on how many facilities a CFPM can cover. There isn’t a set number, the oversight is the most important. Can you cover each place adequately?
• Our January Newsletter will have all the information on the CFPM.
• Need to have the certification information available for health inspectors to look at during an inspection.
• Our inspectors will be given instruction on how to ask about the CFPM to reduce confusion.

| 4  | 10:15-10:30 | Food Borne Illness           | Chris Stringer                      | • Illness training must be verifiable. It must be documented in a way for the inspector to confirm the employees received the training. It cannot be verbal.
• We have created a Restriction and Notification of Ill Food Workers template to use to meet the requirement. | • We work with a dedicated Disease Intervention Specialist (DIS) to monitor Food borne Illness.
• We are currently working on 5 assessment reports, which document the contributing factors that were found during our investigation and the pathogen of interest. Those assessments will go to the Department of Health (DOH). This helps them build a library of what is seen in the field and what trainings they should focus on.
• We hope to begin using the Department of Health’s REDCap system in the new year. This will be a HIPAA compliant way to collect illness complaints. We will make sure to get messaging out once this is up and running. |
| 5  | 10:30-10:35 | Temporary Events and Food Recovery | Brenna Hoppe                         | • Updates to Temporary Event Permits and Forms
• Donated Food Safety Outreach Team | • Sending out a Bulletin to Temporary Event Coordinators and operators with clarification and reminders for the next temporary event season. |
